This state diagram shows a scenario of how MISYS handles transactions. Once a transaction is submitted, MISYS verifies whether the transaction is submitted by a valid user. If so, it processes the transaction with respect to the patient name in the transaction. In case the transaction database has enough space, MISYS appends the new transaction and displays a "success" message. If the system fails in any of the above states, it displays an "error" message.